

Anne Pflieger, CIT has been working in the construction and transportation industries for 28 years. Currently working the estimating, safety, HR, and IT departments for Charles Construction Services in Findlay, OH and Immediate Past National President of the National Association of Women in Construction (NAWIC) she strives to continually enhance women's success in the construction industry.

Many would be content with serving local communities through NAWIC chapter events and helping their chapter progress forward. For Anne it ignited an internal purpose and passion, to not only improve personally, but to support and guide other women in the construction industry to do the same.

In addition, Anne volunteers' countless hours reaching out to potential members and employers encouraging them to support women in construction. She has engaged parallel organizations seeking ways to be of mutual benefit to one another.

Anne's goal for the next few years is to be the conduit to connect and communicate collaboratively to have the conversations that will break the barriers women are facing in the construction industry.

Her aspirations and belief in NAWIC's mission have carried her to Regional Director and to the National Board as an inspiring voice for all. She embraces NAWIC values by living them daily, and in doing so, empowers, elevates, and challenges others to do the same.

NAWIC:

The National Association of Women in Construction (NAWIC) is an association serving 117 chapters across the United States. It was founded as Women in Construction of Fort Worth, Texas in 1953 to enhance the success of women in the construction industry. In 1955, the charter was expanded to allow chapters to form across the country, and the National Association of Women in Construction was born.

Construction is the only industry that encompasses almost every professional discipline. Literally every career sector is available to you: trades, project management, administration, law, finance, insurance... the list is virtually endless. The National Association of Women in Construction (NAWIC) brings women from each of these career sectors together.

An essential purpose of NAWIC is to build leaders to impact the direction of the construction industry. With over 66 years of experience, NAWIC continues to provide support to thousands of members and helps them flourish both professionally and personally. NAWIC locally, regionally, and nationally provides opportunities through monthly chapter meetings, region and national conferences, industry councils, taskforces, committees, interactive webinars, certifications, professional development programs and leadership roles within NAWIC.
